

J. H. NORDSELL, R. I. SIGNAL MAN DROPS DEAD

John H. Nordsell, aged 44 years, who has been in the employ of the Rock Island railroad signal service for more than 21 years and who has been a resident of Mokena for the past 16 years, dropped dead in his home in Mokena last Saturday evening about 6:30 o'clock. Mr. Nordsell had been confined to his home by illness for the past six weeks, Saturday evening as he was entering the bathroom he was seized with a sudden heart attack and dropped dead.

He was signal maintainer on the Rock Island for quite a number of years. He was also much interested in community affairs and served as a village trustee.

Surviving are his wife, Mae; two sons, Jack and Melvin; one daughter, Lorraine, all of Mokena; one brother, Charles; two sisters, Mrs. M. Price and Mrs. Agnes McKay, all of Chicago.

Christian Science services were held Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock in the Sonntag Funeral home in Joliet, with burial in the St. John Cemetery south of Mokena.

Organizing New Community Chorus

For the past few weeks efforts have been put forth in Mokena to organize a community mixed chorus. Realization of that idea was culminated Tuesday evening when about 20 gathered in the Methodist church with the director Mrs. Betty Dystrup of Joliet. Practice held forth for an hour and all were very much pleased with the director and results.

Mrs. Dystrup is the director of the choir of Ottawa Street M. E. church in Joliet, has had a wide experience in singing under notable directors such as Noble Cain and still is taking vocal lessons from a noted instructor in Chicago. The group feels it is a privilege to be in this class.

Everyone in Mokena who can sing a little is urgently invited to come to the next rehearsal Monday evening, May 13, in the Methodist church at 8 o'clock. It is desirous of attaining for Mokena a very fine choral group. Credit for instigating this idea belongs to Mrs. L. R. Theil who sang under Mrs. Dystrup's direction this spring in the choir of the Ottawa Street M. E. church. One of our members has this to say:

"Now that we are organized, I think that we should choose a motto. The best name I can think of would be: 'The Perfect Harmony.' Not only should we strive for perfect harmony in our singing, that part we can and must leave to our director, but we should also strive for perfect harmony among our members when not singing. If we would repeat this motto silently or audibly at every rehearsal and join our hands while so doing, I am sure we all would refrain from making any remarks which would impair perfect harmony."

This is not to be an organization where pride and self-justification shall enter. We all must realize fully, that in this work we can only progress and enjoy ourselves if we all pull together. Each of us is like a part of a motor, each one has to fulfill just his or her part and do not have any other responsibility but this.

Let us be truly democratic and not set ourselves up as little dictators. I say these things not because there is unhappiness to be cured, but to prevent it. We do desire more members, in fact we must have more members. The only way to get them is to create and maintain such perfect harmony that others will want to join us on their own accord, because we are an organization where perfect harmony is the one thing in life everybody strives for, is really to be felt. And we all know that such principles will cast their light a long way and that such principles are bound to bring success. So let us be a group of people who in these days of turmoil, hatred and jealousy band together for only one thing, perfect harmony within and without."

4-H Club To Hold Stunt Night

On April 26 there was a meeting of 4-H officers in the Mokena school.

The presidents, secretary's and treasurer's each met in a separate room and were then instructed by a leader, explaining to them their duties as officers.

It was decided to have the annual 4-H Stunt night on May 25, in St. John's hall in Joliet.

Mr. Freehelten gave a talk on conservation of wild life. Mr. Johnson talked on health and first aid.

All members present then had a good time playing games and singing songs led by Mr. Wm. Bettenhausen.

Baseball Dance At Colonial Hall This Friday Night

The Mokena Baseball Club will sponsor a Dance and Award, Friday, (tonight) May 10 at Colonial hall, New Lenox. The music will be furnished by Lea's Melody Boys. Proceeds will be used to help purchase new uniforms and equipment.

Let's all get together tonight at Colonial Hall and show the boys we appreciate their efforts in trying to place a representative team on the field worthy of Mokena. So! Let's go to the dance!

Season Tickets for the entire schedule of Home games will go on sale next week.

May 13 Official Cleanup Day In Mokena

May 13 has been officially designated as clean-up day for Mokena and all residents are asked to place their rubbish in bags, or other containers and place them where they can be easily picked up by the truck driver. Do not place garbage or ashes in with rubbish.

Two bids for hauling and disposing of the rubbish were presented to the Mokena Council at Tuesday night's meeting. Martin Mueller had a bid for $60 and Louis Stanger submitted a bid of $26 and was awarded the job. All rubbish must be ready by Monday, May 13.

Unpaid Dog Tax To Be Added To Personal Tax

Herman Schweser, who has been the official dog tax collector for Mokena, turned in $63 for dog tax at the Council meeting Tuesday night. He had been given a list of 85 dog owners. He reported that some dog owners refused to pay the dog tax, others had unwanted dogs they sought to get rid of. The Council then ordered the names of all dog owners who refused to pay the dog tax, turned over to Joe Kohl, assessor of Frankfort Township and the tax will be assessed as personal property tax and will be collected as such.

Repair Charges Can Be Added To Real Estate Tax

Property owners in Mokena who refuse to repair broken or damaged concrete walks along their premises came in for discussion by the Mokena Council Tuesday night. It was decided that after the owners of such damaged walks refuse to repair same, the village will cause them to be repaired and the cost of such repair work will be turned in on the taxes of such property in accordance with the village ordinance governing the sidewalk maintenance section. If you are a Mokena property owner and have a concrete walk on your premises along a street and such walk is in need of repairs you will be notified by the village clerk to repair same at your expense and if you fail to do so the village will repair such walk and tax the costs of such work onto the taxes of the property. Sidewalks must be repaired to prevent accidents.

Mokena Quota 20 In Church Rally

Churches of Mokena, Illinois and environs have been assigned a quota of 20 for the "America for God" rally Sunday afternoon, June 2, in Chicago's Soldier Field. Governor Luren D. Dickinson of Michigan and other Christian leaders will address a Christian loyalty assembly expected to reach 100,000. The rally will begin at 3 p. m.

To Hold Free Lecture On Christian Science

A free Christian Science lecture will be held at the First Church Scientist, Joliet, by Miss Florence Middaugh, C. S., of Los Angeles, Calif., in the church edifice, corner Sherman street and second avenue, Sunday afternoon, May 12, 1940 at 3 p. m. The public is cordially invited to attend.

DEATH TAKES OLD FRANKFORT RESIDENT

Mrs. Anna Catherine Baumgartner, nee Schriberstein died in her home in Frankfort on Sunday, May 5, after an illness of several years.

Mrs. Baumgartner was born in Chicago on October 22, 1861. She was baptized in St. Paul's church by Rev. Jas. Hartman on Dec. 30, 1861. After the Chicago Fire in '71 her parents moved to Mokena, where she was confirmed in St. John's church by Rev. Carl Schaub.

She was married to Albert Baumgartner in Chicago on Feb. 27, 1881. And then came to Frankfort where she has lived ever since.

Mr. and Mrs. Baumgartner celebrated their 59th wedding anniversary last February.

She is survived by her husband Albert Baumgartner, five daughters Mrs. Rose Lucas of Oak Park, Mrs. Mabel Wanderlich of Joliet, Miss Augusta Baumgartner of Frankfort, Mrs. Alma Sippel of New Lenox, Mrs. Lillian Zechlin, Frankfort and three sons, Alfred Baumgartner, Virginia, Minn., Mr. Walter Baumgartner, Frankfort and Mr. Wm. Baumgartner, Homewood, Ill. Also 21 grand-children and six great grand-children and many other relatives and a host of friends.

Interment was at Graceland cemetery, Chicago.

Open Drive For Boy Scout Fund

The annual campaign for the solicitation of funds for Boy Scout work in Orland Park will officially open Friday night, May 19, at a meeting of workers to be held at the American Legion hall, Orland Park. It is expected that a group of at least 20 workers will be present to further extend the work of the campaign. Mr. F. H. Glahn, Orland Park, is the Campaign chairman. A special committee helping in the organization of the campaign consists of the following men:

W. R. Schussler, George Cox, David Krueger, Ralph L. Town and Chas. Maddox.

A special folder and letter explaining the purpose of the campaign and the benefits Scout work in Orland Park derives from this effort have been distributed by the Scouts of Troop 51, Orland Park, Owen Creer, Scoutmaster.

Other communities in Potawatomi Trails Council are conducting similar campaigns to help cover the cost of the administration of Scouting throughout the council. The 1940 budget has been set by the Executive Board at $6,180.00. No quota has been set for any community but the Orland Park committee hopes to secure approximately $100. as Orland Park's part toward the Council budget. The work of the Council is made possible through these financial efforts and very definitely benefits the work of scouting in our community. Since this is the only means that the Potawatomi Trails Council has of securing funds to support its work, it is hoped that every public-spirited citizen who believes in this great character building work will liberally support the campaign at this time.

Will Open Home To Garden Club

Mrs. Everett Merfeld will open her home Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to the New Lenox Garden club. Anyone interested in Flowers or Gardening, is invited to attend. The affair will be in the form of an afternoon tea. Mrs. James O'Rourke and Mrs. Edward Osmus are the assisting hostesses.

Westinghouse Show Well Attended

The annual Westinghouse Festival sponsored last Friday night in the Tinley Park school gym by the Bettenhausen Hardware Store drew a full house. A very good program was presented in which the latest in ranges, electric cookers and other Westinghouse home appliances were demonstrated. A moving picture show was also presented and which was much enjoyed.

The following received special prizes consisting of various Westinghouse appliances: Mrs. Carrie Sippel, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Huhnstock, Mrs. Wm. Witte, Mrs. Henry F. Witte, Wm. Kollmann, Harold Schuldt, Henry C. Mueller, and Mrs. Fred Mager.

Mr. Olson of the Chicago Regional Planning Commission attended the meeting of the Mokena Council Tuesday night and in a very thorough and comprehensive manner outlined the procedure used in creating a zoning commission and in adopting a zoning ordinance and building code. He further pointed out how a properly zoned community protects property values and makes for a more attractive town.

The Mokena Council has been considering the zoning proposition for sometime. A special meeting of the board will be held next Monday night at which time Mayor Harry F. Mall will appoint a zoning commission and a map will be prepared designating the business and residential areas of the village. Following the adoption of the zoning ordinance a building ordinance will also be adopted. The restrictions to be imposed will prevent the building of tar paper shacks and chicken houses for dwellings inside the incorporated limits of the village.

Have You Any Counterfeit Money?

In accord with its educational project the Mokena Civic association will sponsor the second in a series of town meetings to be held in the public school auditorium on Friday, May 24, at 8 p. m. The United States Secret Service has consented to send out two men on that evening to give Mokena citizens a practical instruction against the twin dangers of counterfeit money and Government forgery. In addition to a talk on this subject, these government men will show an educational talking picture on the general topic:

KNOW YOUR MONEY.
The Secret Service Department is cooperating with local peace and police officers in an effort to prevent crime. All it asks is that the public attend these meetings. There will be no charge. The Civic association hopes that several hundred people will attend this important meeting. So, put a red circle around May 24.

Advance Ticket Sale Going Good

Tickets for "The Trouble Chasers of 1940" went on sale this week and from indications it looks like there will be three full houses at the Palos Park Village Hall on May 23-24-25. Members of cast are rehearsing nightly to make this the outstanding show of the year. The electrical effects and mechanical equipment are being installed this week as well as the finishing touches on the new scenery. The kiddies ball with 30 little girls and boys is one of the outstanding hits of the show as is the Darktown Jubilee, composed of all the high colored, blue blooded aristocrats from Harlem. School Days, a comedy burlesque on the Little Red School House will carry you back to your own school days, and the professor with his hilarious class will set a new standard in school behavior. Instrumental selections by William Fuhrburg, violinist, accompanied by Glenn Harding on the piano will add a classical note that will long be remembered. Watch the next issue of this paper for list of characters in this 16 act musical comedy revue. Chic Perkins-King, directress informs us that rehearsals are going fine and she promises a performance that will be par excellence.

Tinley RNA Has Largest Group At Mokena Guest Night

The Guest Night sponsored by the Mokena Sunbeam Camp 6054 of the Royal Neighbors at the Mokena School gym Tuesday night was very well attended, 134 guests being present, coming from Plainfield, Lockport, New Lenox, Frankfort, Tinley Park and Orland Park. The Tinley Park Camp had the largest group present, 35 attending from that camp. The Plainfield group was represented by members of the two RNA camps of that district, who made the trip here in a chartered bus.

Will Observe 3rd Anniversary

A third anniversary party will be held at Pete's Tavern in the Lincoln Estates Saturday night May 11. Everyone invited.

Frankfort Civic Club Sponsors Dance

The Frankfort Civic Club is sponsoring a dance in the Frankfort School gym this Saturday night May 11. Everyone invited.

Mokena Band To Present Concert

Well folks, another big day is coming—May 17! Don't forget the day. We hope you will all help our School Band by coming to the band concert. The children are working very hard to make this concert a success. All the members of the band parents' association have also worked real hard to get the money together for the new band suits which they are going to wear at this concert. Now we would like to get a little more money together to buy some very necessary instruments. Don't forget the date, come and hear good music and see the Band in their new uniforms. Concert starts at 8:30 p. m., Daylight Saving Time.

Among the numbers to be played are:

OVERTURES:
Required numbers on the State Contest list.
WALTZES—
MARCHES—
Stirring martial music.
REVERIES—
Tone poems.
SOLOS—
TRIOS—
Ensemble playing.

Will Ride Bull To New York World's Fair

Ted Terry of Idaho who rode a bull from the far west as far as Aug. Schmeckpepper's farm near Tinley Park, is preparing to leave Monday morning on his way to the New York Fair.

This Friday morning the bull is being shod by Peter Van Brussel, Tinley blacksmith on the Schmeckpepper farm. This is done to protect the animals hoofs while walking on the concrete pavements. Mr. Terry will sell pictures enroute to the Fair. He is to be awarded with a cash prize it is understood.

Mr. Terry has been on the road for over a year while riding the bull.

New Lenox CYO Players To Present Comedy at Mokena

The New Lenox CYO will present a three act comedy entitled "Oh Promise Me" at the St. Marys' Hall in Mokena Thursday night, May 16. This is a very fine offering and a big attendance is anticipated.

Tinley Legion Post To Present Two Night Play

The time is getting short to the Big American Legion show on May 17 and 18 at the Tinley Park auditorium. Don Nash and his orchestra will open the show at 8:15 p.m. with a timely overture and then up with the curtain and The Show Is On.

Everything is nearing completion for the opening night. Tickets are going fast and every legionsaire is on his toes waiting for the final nite.

First, a word about the programs. They will be given away each night as a souvenir and I am sure you will find them exceedingly interesting and useful, a veritable classified directory that you will find handy at all times, or you may keep it as a memento of a very pleasant evening.

Come and see old "Doc Sweetwater" and his able assistant "Smudge" try to fool the public into buying their famous "YU-CAW-TAWSIE-HAWSIE Bitters" and they are very convincing too.

Then there is "Train-Time" with a hay-seed station agent and a snappy little show girl, which is a truly amusing skit.

Increase in Acreage of Hybrid Corn Is Proving Profitable to U. S. Farmer

By JEROME MARKHAM
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO. — Hybrid corn, which produces bigger crops on a smaller acreage, has brought to agriculture, for the first time, the industrial technique of standardized parts and mass production.

Hybrid is a tough, pugilistic sort of corn. It battles storms and other vicissitudes of the weather successfully. It beats off the attacks of bugs and disease. But most important, it yields from 10 to 25 per cent more per acre than the old types of open-pollinated corn. Moreover, it is of superior quality.

Practically unknown to the average farmer five years ago, hybrid corn, it is estimated, will be planted on nearly 20,000,000 acres this spring. Most farmers who have grown hybrid are delighted with the results they have obtained. Few, however, know how or why it came about.

It all goes back nearly a century to an old monastery garden in Austria. There Gregor Johann Mendel, peasant by birth, monk and abbot of Brunn, devoted hours of patient research to plant breeding. In time he discovered the rules which govern the inheritance of characters and the way those characters can be separated by inbreeding. In 1865 he published a monograph entitled "Research on Hybridization." The paper attracted little attention. It was not until 1900, or 16 years after Mendel's death, that interest was kindled in his startling discovery.

Testing Mendel's Theory.

Then scientists in this country began to use corn to test out Mendel's theories. G. H. Shull, at the Carnegie experiment station, E. M. East at the University of Illinois, and Donald F. Jones at the University of Connecticut, did the pioneer work. They found that by breeding a corn plant to itself ("selfing") by fertilizing the silks of a plant with pollen from the same plant) strains were developed that looked poor but did amazing things when crossed with another inbred strain.

Doctor Jones paved the way for the modern hybrid industry by suggesting, in 1919, the method now generally used for combining inbred lines into hybrid combinations known as "double crosses."

First step, as has been pointed out, is "selfing." The breeder starts with a good ear from some standard, productive variety. After planting, he covers the shoots with a paper bag before the silks are exposed. When the tassels start to shed their pollen, the silks are carefully fertilized and then kept covered so that no other pollen can reach them.

HYBRID WINS CROWN—C. E. Troyer of LaFontaine, Ind., whose hybrid corn won him the "corn king" title at last year's international livestock exposition, is congratulated by his friends.

Result Is Amazing.

Next step is to cross these inbreds. The result of this "single cross" is startling. For some reason that science cannot yet explain, the offspring of these runty inbreds is an amazingly strong, vigorous and large plant.

Then the breeder takes two single crosses which tests have proved to be good and crosses them. This "double cross" is a combination of four inbred parents. Again the tedious process of trial and error is repeated until the breeder finally gets a combination that includes high yielding ability, strong roots, stiff stalks and a high quality ear with a mysterious vigor that results from hybridization.

Now the standard parts are available for marketing to the farmer as commercial hybrid seed. Mass production is the next step.

Fertilization Important.

One of the important results of the switch to hybrid is the change it has wrought in the attitude of many farmers toward fertilization. Statisticians have figured out that 50 bushels of corn (not a remarkably high yield as hybrids go) removes about 75 pounds of nitrogen from the soil. It takes out about 21 pounds of phosphorus and about 41 pounds of potash. Bigger yields naturally make even greater demands on the soil's fertility.

Thus, remarkable as hybrid seed is, it has to be accompanied by a well-rounded program of soil management and the use of fertilizer if results, in the form of high production, are to be maintained. Only then is there a satisfactory replacement of the essential plant food elements which hybrid corn removes from the soil.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

CARTER FIELD

Army preparedness is hampered by lack of funds, generals tell the senate . . . Europe's quarrels will be reflected in United States elections.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Outside of airplanes and trucks, the industrial preparedness of this country as a result of war orders has been more or less a flop to date. Incidentally, the army has shown itself pathetically inferior to the navy in its strategy on Capitol Hill. Somehow the admirals are much more effective than the generals.

You don't catch the admirals, for instance, making speeches to the country saying that everything is fine—that the navy is in tip-top condition and could whip its weight in wildcats, or Nazis, or what have you. No, whenever you hear an admiral talking in public, or for that matter in private, he is bewailing the fact that the navy's battleships are getting pretty old, that at least three of them could not figure in a battle line because their big guns have not sufficient elevation, or that because of this or that reason the navy simply does not have enough money to spend.

Secretary Woodring

GENERALS DO GOOD JOB.

The generals seem to do a pretty good job when they are talking to small subcommittees on Capitol Hill, in executive session. They even make converts in the senate and house who strive zealously to do things for the army. But the admirals go right to the public with their story, and are in no whit inferior to the generals when it comes to their committee appearances and their individual contacts with the national legislators.

Of course this time, and for the last two or three times for that matter, the army has been handicapped by the known difference in view between the secretary of war and the assistant secretary of war. This feud has run much longer than most of the spectacular feuds in federal administrations. Washington has expected for years that President Roosevelt would eliminate either Harry H. Woodring, the secretary, or Louis Johnson, the assistant secretary. There are lots of theories as to why he has not removed one or the other, but none seem completely satisfying.

The navy, in this administration, has been aces from the first. The President himself was more directly interested, because of his life-long love of the sea.

MIX WAR AND POLITICS

With most Italo-Americans waiting to hear from Il Duce whether they are to be pro-Nazi, pro-ally, or continue neutral, and with a much larger percentage of German-Americans fervently pro-Hitler than most observers suspect, the presidential and congressional campaign now under way is precisely what certain statesmen back in 1920 dreaded if the United States should join the League of Nations.

It would seem as if this country is being torn internally by European quarrels almost as much as if it had joined the League.

Another surprise to some of the men who fought and beat American participation in the League is that apparently Woodrow Wilson was absolutely right, and the so-called reservationists absolutely wrong, about Article 10. It will be recalled that Article 10 was the one which provided that if any nation should attack another and refuse to submit the quarrel to arbitration of the League, all members of the League would be obligated to furnish troops or ships or both to bring the aggressor to terms.

IF IDEA HAD WON

But suppose Wilson's idea of the League had been carried out! There would have been no aggression by Japan in China. There would have been no conquest of Ethiopia by Italy. Albania would still be free. There would have been no Munich, and no European war.

That is not by any means to say that if the United States had ratified the Versailles treaty, without reservations, and become an active member of the League of Nations, all these aggressions would have been prevented. If Wilson's ideas had been carried out, yes, but there is plenty of doubt that the League would have been any more vigorous with the United States a member.

There might even be a fairly grounded suspicion that the United States would not have sent troops and ships to prevent the conquest of China, or Ethiopia, or Poland, if called on by the League to do so. After all, the United States conveniently forgot all about a solemn treaty it had with Korea when Japan annexed that country.

Chronic Pains May Be Aided By Body Brace

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

A PREPARATORY school reports that while the parents of the present pupils were a little taller than their parents (the grandparents of the present pupils), the present pupils are so much taller than their grandparents that longer beds have become necessary. And physicians having to do with the examination and care of previous and present generations of preparatory and university students report that the average height of the present students is between one and two inches more than the previous generation.

If this increase in height were accompanied by an increase in width and strength, it would be a great boon, but unfortunately this increase in height is often accompanied by thinness of body, and the lack of fat to hold up the abdominal organs, allows the stomach, intestines and kidneys to drop more or less, thus interfering with digestion.

In describing a case before the International Assembly of Physicians in Philadelphia, Prof. Peter T. Bohan, University of Kansas school of medicine, said:

Chronic Pain Relieved.

"A woman came to me complaining of pain in the right lower side of the abdomen; diarrhea and chronic fatigue. The pain had been present for months, with no acute attack over a period of weeks. At the time I saw her it had been almost constant for the biggest part of the day for over seven years and was worse when she was overtired. She also had had a backache for 20 years. She consulted me over a year ago and the first thing I did was to take her history (listen to her story and have her answer my questions) which required three hours. I gave her some advice and a back brace. She had had no pain and her bowels and general health are better."

Epileptic Attacks Greatly Reduced

PHYSICIANS now look back but a few years to bring to mind the large number of patients suffering with epilepsy who "took fits" on the street, in their homes, churches and theaters or anywhere else they happened to be. Today it is uncommon to see a patient undergoing an epileptic attack.

Here are a few simple rules to be followed:

1. Cutting down on all starch foods—bread, sugar, potatoes, pastries.
2. Cutting down on all liquids—water, tea, coffee, milk, soft and hard drinks.
3. Increasing the fat foods—butter, cream, fat meat, egg yolks.
4. The use of a tablet of phenobarbital (½ to 1½ grains), as prescribed by a physician, every 24 hours.

However, the body pays for its relief by giving up some of its good rich blood.

Patients Are Examined.

Dr. G. Maillard and Miss Jammet state in Paris Medical Journal that having observed anaemia (thin blood) in two epileptic patients who had been treated for a long time with phenobarbital, they then examined the blood of 15 epileptic patients who had been treated with phenobarbital for several years. In eight of the patients they detected a more or less severe reduction in red blood corpuscles and also other changes. As the reduction of the red corpuscles (and the other changes also) came about very slowly, neither patient nor physician suspected that the symptoms—tiredness, paleness, rapid heart beat, the swelling of ankles—were due to anaemia following the use of phenobarbital.

Now the epileptic attacks must be prevented and phenobarbital must be used, but these investigators state that the blood can be built up again by reducing the dose of phenobarbital and by treating the patient with liver extract. It is likely that ordinary liver—four to five ounces a day—would give satisfactory results.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Can nervousness cause ulcer of the stomach?

A.—Yes. Nervousness or emotional disturbances can cause peptic ulcer—ulcer of the stomach and small intestine.

Q.—What will cure a cough?

A.—If the cough is due to congestion a drug to cut the mucus is needed. If the cough is due to a habit or an irritation a "quieting" drug is used.

Robot Observer Aids U. S. Weather Forecasters

UP SHE GOES—The radiosonde, a miniature broadcasting station, being sent aloft from the bridge of a Coast Guard cutter.

By WILLIAM NUGENT

WASHINGTON.—The famous remark uttered by Mark Twain has through the years become so traditional and so often repeated that most of us are inclined to agree that the weather is something we can't do much about. However, in our deep appreciation of the sagacity of the immortal Mark Twain we lose sight of the fact that the weather forecaster is just about the bravest man in the world when he makes a forecast for tomorrow's weather.

Guess-Work Eliminated.

He has about as much information to go on as the doctor who receives a telephone call from a man who says he "has a temperature" and wants the good doctor to tell him whether he has measles or meningitis. The weather forecaster's diagnosis must be based to a large extent upon the surface weather map, and this map gives comparatively meager information of the atmospheric conditions at the higher altitudes where most of our weather is produced.

HERE IT IS—Here signals from the radiosonde are being recorded with special equipment aboard the cutter.

In recent years, however, much of the guess-work has been taken away. With the rise of aviation, the general interest in upper air conditions has increased and aircraft have made it possible to obtain upper air observations more frequently and in more localities than formerly with sounding balloons and kites. The radiosonde, a miniature broadcasting station with a parachute attachment which weighs less than two pounds, has come into quite general use for the recording of pressure, temperature and humidity in the upper atmosphere. This robot weather observer is sent aloft attached to a carrier balloon from the decks of floating weather bureau stations on two coast guard cutters in mid-Atlantic and from the grounds of six airports in the country. The radiosonde sends back signals which give the temperature, air pressure and humidity at all heights reached by the balloon.

Aids Weather Forecasts.

The ocean observations, which began only recently, are of great value to the weather bureau, especially along the Atlantic coast. Since last fall, when war broke out in Europe and ships of nearly every European nation ceased sending weather information, the bureau has been seriously handicapped in making forecasts of value to ocean commerce. This observational work, which is gradually expanding into a network of observing stations, yields weather service for all types of uses. The basic observations are the same whether the specific forecast is for use of the aviator, the mariner, or the farmer.

THERE IT GOES—After weather observations are complete, they are immediately radioed to Washington.

Everett Mitchell, radio announcer on the National Farm and Home hour, has been telling the farmers of the nation that "It's a Beautiful Day in Chicago" every day for years and years, but they know his weather report is just a little white lie. The farmers, like the mariners and aviators, still look to the weather bureau for their authentic weather reports. Mark Twain, notwithstanding, there are few human activities which can boast complete indifference to weather, present or future.

Disappearing Sales Tax Tokens Present Real Mystery

DENVER.—What happens to all of the sales tax tokens in America? State Treasurer Charles Armstrong of Colorado has admitted that he couldn't solve the mystery in his own state, or in the nation.

In circulation—or elsewhere—in Colorado alone there are 36,691,500 of the little aluminum discs, the treasurer said in a report. He pointed out that was 33.5 tokens for every man, woman and child in the state. They cost the state $69,333 to manufacture and circulate. "I know that every man and woman in the state isn't running around with 33½ tokens jingling in his or her pockets," Armstrong said. "So what happens to them?"

Some of the missing millions of tokens are in cash registers, Armstrong guessed, and quite a few have been taken into other states by tourists. He said he supposed a few thousand more were in the vest pockets of worn-out suits.

Navy Man Piloted Plane

In First U. S. Air Flight NORFOLK, VA.—Capt. Patrick N. L. Bellinger, commanding officer of the United States naval air station here, piloted the first airplane struck by bullets in combat.

While flying over Vera Cruz during the Mexican trouble in 1914, Bellinger's Curtiss seaplane was hit by bullets fired by ground troops.

Bellinger also is believed to be the first aviator to attack enemy soldiers from the air.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

By the time O'Leary reached the tent, Norwood was in an easy camp-chair, cutting the pages of a new book and smoking as if there were nothing on earth to be troubled about.

"That lamp ain't fit to read by," said O'Leary. "You'll ruin your eyes. The only kind of engineer that can look after himself has a couple of fingers missing, along o' having learned what engineering is! Let me turn it out. I'll fix it later."

"Come in. Sit down."

O'Leary blew out the lamp. Then he sat. It was not yet night outside, but it was too dark in the tent for them to see each other's faces.

"Meaning you?" said O'Leary. "I could have picked you off against that lamplight from a hundred yards away, aye and no one know who done it."

"Talk," said Norwood. "I'm dry o' talking. I've a throat like a baker's oven."

"You shall have a drink presently."

"Said the devil to the sinner! That Bengali doctor's sore at someone. He's scared. He's rolled. He's up to mischief. Like all them Bengalis, he's a mixture of too many different kinds of education. He's as full of spite as a scalded cat. He has imagination like the toothache. What he needs is an umbrella, to keep worry off with."

"Did he talk to you?"

"Did he!—Time to post the sentries?"

"Stoddart is doing it now. Can't you hear him?"

"Yeh, but I know Stoddart."

"Stoddart has his orders. I will go the rounds presently. What did the Bengali doctor tell you? Come on now, out with it."

"The way I managed him was this," said O'Leary. "I was looking in on Mrs. Harding, cracking on I'd come to fix the plumbing, on account o' my hearing her raising hell. She was doing a better job of that than you or I could. I understand she's a widow. I don't blame her husband for taking a chance on the next world. She has her things pretty near packed, in about a lorry-load o' trunks on the veranda. She was cussing out the servants until the doctor turned up, and then she demanded her bill, and he remarked she didn't owe him nothing. So I knew right then, there was a cockroach in somebody's butter. I stuck around, umbrageous."

"What she said to that Bengali doctor, mind you, I wouldn't say to a thief. He was trying to persuade her to take some physic for her stomach. And she wouldn't. He said it 'ud make her stomach easy, and she'd be fit to travel. He offered to swallow some of it himself, to prove it was harmless. But she said he could swallow the bottle, for all o' her. He said he was trying to speed the parting guest, and she said she didn't need no speedin'."

"I showed up, suitable respectful, cracking on I hadn't heard nothing. And I said I was Captain Norwood's private servant and had the Captain left his pipe on the veranda when he called this afternoon? You should have heard that female talk, and what she said about you! She said she wouldn't put it past you to have smoked your pipe on her veranda, but if you had done it she'd have kicked the stinking thing into the bushes. Long and short o' it, she don't like you. She pitched a hundred-rupee note at the doctor for his fee, and he let it lie there. I followed the Bengali. I overtook him where it was quiet, and no shrubbery where folks could scratch their noses poking into other people's business. I spoke reproachful."

"I asked him: 'Doctor sahib, did you tell that woman what she said you told her about Captain Norwood?' He came back at me with: 'Are you genuinely Captain Norwood's servant?' And I said I'm not genuine, there's less than sixteen annas to a rupee. And when he'd thought a bit he answered: 'Yes, I told her. I repeated rumor. I should not have done it. He acted nervous. And after a minute, he pulled out five rupees and gave 'em to me. I looked noncommittal, so he gave me five more. Then he said to me: 'Will you be seeing Captain Norwood? How soon? Tell him, but don't say who told you, that his life is in danger—tonight! Warn him that his enemies have heard about that bribe, and they will try to kill him. Let him look to himself.'

"He don't care a damn about you. But he's scared stiff o' what might happen if they killed a British officer in Kadur. I figured out the meaning o' that, quicker than you'd take a snapshot. He's up to something crafty. No knowing what. But he figures he can get away with it all right if nothing happens, like the killing of a British officer, that would bring a British investigation on the scene."

Norwood refilled his pipe: "So you think the priests intend to murder me?"

"No."

"Neither do I."

"If they did intend to," said O'Leary, "that Bengali doctor wouldn't know about it."

"Well," said Norwood, "you've done nicely. You have a hundred and ten rupees for an hour's work."

"Not me. I'm proud. I gave him back his ten rupees. He's nothing but a babu doctor."

Norwood found the whiskey bottle in the dark. He poured a stiff drink and locked up the bottle, gave the drink to O'Leary, and walked off on his rounds to instruct the sentries.

O'Leary waited for him outside the tent. He looked as nervous as the shadow of a tree that quivers in the evening wind. Twice he started to overtake Norwood, but thought better of it. At last when Norwood returned, he hesitated, and if Norwood hadn't faced him he might not have spoken.

"Still here?" said Norwood.

"What's on your mind?"

"There's a man I'm scared of."

"Oh? Who is he?"

"He's an old acquaintance o' yours."

"I asked: who is he?"

"A man name o' Gulbaz."

"Oh, is that devil in Kadur? Why didn't you tell me sooner?"

"Because I was afraid you'd go after him."

Norwood smiled. O'Leary grinned.

"What I do," said Norwood, "and what I don't do are none of your business."

"Yes, they are! Gulbaz 'ud kill you. Then what? He swore to get you, on account o' that Poona business, when you caught him stealing from the secret files."

"Yes, I remember he was angry."

"You shouldn't have let him off. I warned you then. You said you'd a good reason."

"It was a crazy reason."

"Remember your manners."

"I haven't any—not when you go chancing getting bumped off by a badmash that 'ud skin his mother for the price o' leather. You said you'd catch him later doing something important."

"You're not to touch him. Gulbaz is mine, saith the rule of the game. I need him. As soon as this little business in Kadur is finished, we've a survey to run, eight hundred miles from here, where there's a dark little game going on. And your friend Gulbaz is the bell-wether."

"He's a pig and a snake and a son of a—"

"Never mind what he is. It's what he shall do that matters. He shall decoy his friends."

Moses laughed: "That swine hasn't any friends."

"He has three bosom friends and a gang of eleven all told. He shall decoy them all into one net."

"Says you," observed Moses.

"Don't be theatrical. You may go and talk to Gulbaz if you want to, but you're not to touch him. If you get yourself killed, I'll pay that priest of yours to say no masses for you. You shall stay in hell forever."

"Mayn't I have just one crack at him? I could make him a hospital job, where you'd know where he is and—"

"I have given you a definite order that you're not to touch him."

"Yes, but suppose he takes a crack at me?"

"In that case, you're to run away."

"Stoddart can't run. He's too fat. I'd like to borrow Stoddart."

"What for?"

"I'll need him."

"I said: what for?"

"For a witness. If I don't have a witness, there'll be nothing Gulbaz won't do or won't swear to."

"How long do you expect to be gone?"

"About twenty minutes. Maybe less. It don't take long to get Gulbaz' goat."

"I can't afford to lose Stoddart."

"I'll bring that big baby back as safe as if he rode a bathchair."

"Very well, I will tell Stoddart to go with you."

CHAPTER XV

It had been an army lorry once, but it had fallen on evil days and was now a contractor's truck, so it looked suitably unofficial. The Indian driver had been commandeered by Moses and for one rupee eight annas in lawful money had agreed to go anywhere, lawful or not. Inside, beneath the rotting and ragged canvas cover, Moses sat on the floor facing Sergeant Stoddart.

"I thought this was all about a diamond mine," said Stoddart.

"You keep your fat head out o' mischief and let problems alone," said Moses. "Tonight's no problem. It's easy excep' the consequences. We're going to lose a good officer, one way or the other, and the question is which."

"You half breeds are all alike," said Stoddart. "You aren't say what you think." He stuck his thumb in the bowl of his pipe and struck another match. His eyes were inquisitive. "You don't mean—"

"I mean you're a fathead. That's plain talk, isn't it? Now it's your turn. You tell me what you're thinking about, plain words and no this, that, and the other. Come clean."

"Everyone in camp has heard it," said Stoddart. "First I heard of it was from a coolie down by the river."

"Heard what?"

"Someone's been bribed."

"And you believe it?"

"Long ago," said Stoddart, "I gave up believing anything in India except pay-day and where there's smoke there's fire. I've known of officers burning their fingers. If the officer we're thinking about took a bribe, he'll be broke for it as sure as you and I sit in this truck. That's one way we can lose him. What's the other?"

"He didn't take no bribe," said Moses. "Me or you might take one—your special. But not him."

"They may have framed him," said Stoddart.

"They'll frame your picture in a museum one o' these days as the champion fathead that ever came even from England to look popeyed at a puzzle. There's three men in India who can't be framed successful, that's to say unless they frame each other. One's me. Another's Captain High-Cockalorum Norwood. And the third is Gulbaz."

"Who'd want to frame you?" asked Stoddart. "You're not worth it. What's the other way we can lose the Captain?"

"Woman."

"He's no womanizer," said Stoddart.

"You ought to be a reporter for the papers. You get all your facts right. I said woman. A woman, you fathead. One woman—half o' two women. Can you figure that one?"

"Well then, what woman are you talking about?"

"Naming no names, she's at the palace."

"You mean Miss Lynn Harding?"

"It's all over the camp that Prince Rundhia has her number."

"You seen her?" asked Moses.

"Yes," said Stoddart, "I saw her on horseback riding with the Prince. She's a good looker."

"How close did you look?"

"Oh, a couple of hundred yards."

"Are you blind?"

"I've better sight than you, you drunkard."

"And you couldn't tell, from two hundred yards away, that that girl's a good 'un? You want to bet? D'you want to bet your month's pay against mine that Norwood hasn't made up his mind that he wants her?"

Stoddart refilled his pipe with almost supernatural patience. "What are we up to tonight?" he demanded. "Why are we here in this bloody truck? Where are we going?"

"Didn't he tell you?"

"No, he told me to look after you."

"That's what I told him to tell you."

"All right, General Moses, where are we going? To the Promised Land?"

"We're going hunting a bribe."

"Who from?"

"Gulbaz."

"How much?"

"You may keep all you get."

"How much do you reckon we'll get?"

"Twice half o' what he thinks it's worth. We split it fifty-fifty, on account o' your puritan nature and your good looks and your gift for not letting your head know what your brains are doing."

"What are we going to be bribed for?"

"For our virtue. What else could he buy? Mine ain't for sale, but yours is. He wants it for the travelling wax-works o' curiosities he's taking along to tour India."

"All right then, put it this way: why are we worth bribing?"

"We ain't," said Moses.

"Speak for yourself. Whose money is he chucking away?"

"You may bet your boots it isn't his money. Considering the kind o' badmash crook he is, that has to pay out money by the bucketful to keep his skin on his back and his line o' retreat open, Gulbaz is close. He's so mean that a Scotch flea couldn't get a living off him."

Moses raised the cover of the truck and took a quick glance at the narrow street. Then he lowered the cover and spoke:

"We'll be there in a minute. I want you to get this, Stoddart. Try to understand it. It's important. Gulbaz has it in for Captain Norwood. That's how big a sucker he is. He's crafty. But he hasn't sense enough to know that there's two men in India can beat him. One's me. The other's Cockalorum Norwood. Catch-em-alive-o Norwood. One o' these days Gulbaz is going to sit in Norwood's net, alive and nasty. But not yet."

"Why not?"

"None o' your business. You know only a fathead sergeant. You know nothing o' the inside workings o' things. But Gulbaz isn't here in Kadur for his health, or for yours and mine either. He's here to get Captain Norwood and make a profit at the same time. He's got a game on, and he's got it all timed to a minute. That's why you're here."

"There you go again," said Stoddart. "Blowed if I understand you. Speak plain."

"I'll say it slow," said Moses. "Words o' one syllable. If I was alone, and if Gulbaz was ready, he'd stick a knife into me. But seeing that you're along, and you a soldier that has cost the taxpayer a heap o' money for upholding the blooming dignity of His Majesty the King, he'll think twice about it. If I was stuck in the back it 'ud be a loss to the human race and a bull's eye for Gulbaz. But they wouldn't even write it up in the paper."

"Not in the society column?" asked Stoddart.

"But if it happened to you, half the sweating countryside 'ud have to turn out for your funeral, marching slow, arms reversed, Dead March in Saul. And after that, there'd be an investigation, two courts of enquiry, military and civil, plus a headache for the Maharajah and at least a column in the Bombay Times embellishing the record of a faithful Tommy Atkins."

Mexico Reveals Many Interesting Varieties of Cactus

From Mexico come many interesting species of the Cactaceae. Many of these have been discovered only recently, writes E. C. Hummel in Nature Magazine. One of the comparatively new discoveries is the Mamillaria hahniana, known as the Old Lady of Mexico. This was discovered in 1929 in Central Mexico, where it grows in large clusters, completely cloaked in long, fine hair. During the blooming season it wears a crown of pink or rose flowers. Little less conspicuous is the crown of red berries that is later pushed from between the flowering tubercles, to remain for weeks like a crown of rubies on a white-haired lady.

One of the most difficult plants to locate is Roseocactus kotschyeyanus, which belongs to the living rock group of the Cactaceae. On account of the shape of its tubercles, it carries the common name of deer-foot cactus. It has a large tuberous root and the entire plant is sunken entirely in the ground. Here it is safe from the eyes of the collector until blooming time, when the large pink flowers that arise from the center disclose its presence.

Cephalocereus hoppenstedtii is one of the rarer of the old man group. It is also referred to as one of the torch cactuses, as it takes very little imagination to make it such, when moonlight or late sunlight finds a reflector in the mass of beautiful white spines. In its natural habitat it reaches a height of ten meters.

Not less fascinating than these normal forms are the strange shapes produced when something goes wrong with nature's control of growth. The red cockscomb found in many gardens has been developed through many years of selection and is propagated from seed. In cactuses such forms are especially interesting. While the cause of this phenomenon is a controversial subject, scientists agree that in certain cases it is hereditary.

HABAKKUK FIGHTS THROUGH DOUBT TO FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Habakkuk 1:12-2:4.
GOLDEN TEXT—The just shall live by his faith.—Habakkuk 2:4.

"The just shall live by his faith"—the great rallying cry of the Reformation; in fact, the very essence of Christianity, is found in the glorious conclusion which the prophet Habakkuk reaches in his triumphant confidence in God. Trying circumstance, doubt and fear must all yield to faith in God.

The lesson for today is peculiarly appropriate to the situation in which the world finds itself just now. Men's hearts are failing them for fear. It seems to them that all is chaotic disorder; they wonder whether God has any plan for the world and its people, and whether He really cares. "Why doesn't God do something?" is the question on many lips. The answer is in our lesson.

I. Believe, Though Surrounded by Questions (1:12-17).

Habakkuk does not question that his people had sinned and were worthy of God's disciplinary chastening, but he is astonished to learn that God plans to use the wicked Chaldeans to bring it about. Questions pour in upon him as he describes their iniquity (v. 13), and speaks of them as catching Judah in their net (vv. 14, 15) and gloating over their victims (vv. 16, 17).

He does not yet know the answer to his questions, but he has already stated the foundation of his faith in verse 12. Whatever happens, no matter how sore the trial and non-understandable the outworking of God's plan, the prophet is sure of his God as the eternal and holy One. The point to be borne in mind in such a time is that God is not making plans for the moment or because of some unexpected change in circumstances. He is "from everlasting" (v. 12). His plans are eternal. But He is also the "Holy One" (v. 12). It may seem for the present that sin and wickedness have triumphed, but let us remember that the eternal plans of God are conceived and executed in holiness and power.

II. Be Alert in the Midst of Uncertainty (2:1).

One who does not have faith in God is prone to say in such times that all hope is lost, and give up in despair. Not so Habakkuk. He knew that there is nothing harder than to wait patiently for God. He determines to be neither discouraged nor impatient, but to stand watch in the tower (v. 1). "His words bespeak a very right and proper condition of soul. Perplexed and confused by the seeming enigma of God's ways, he owns he may require reproof, and takes his stand upon the watch tower, above the mists of the earth and beyond the thoughts and doings of men, where he can quietly wait on God and look out to see what He will say to him" (Ironside).

How desperately we need such alert and earnest watchers in our day. Christians, arise! Do not permit yourself to be either lulled into a false security or into deadening discouragement.

III. Receive the Answer of Triumphant Faith (2:2-4).

"The Lord answered me." He always does, if we are ready to listen and to abide His time. Habakkuk received a vision of God's truth in which he was to write so plainly that everyone who read it would understand it and, in turn, run to others with the message. Those of us who teach and preach would do well to follow that admonition. All too often our message is not understood or fails to stir those who hear it to go quickly and tell others.

Looking forward to Christ, the just man of Habakkuk's day was to live by faith; even as we of this day, looking back to the cross of Christ, are justified by faith and then are to go on to live by faith. This is the word which, as we have already suggested, stirred Luther and his fellows to bring about the Reformation. Long before Luther's day, however, the same words had come by the Holy Spirit's inspiration to be the heart of the great messages of Paul the apostle as he taught justification (Rom. 1:16, 17), as he defended grace against legalism (Gal. 3:11), and as he portrayed "the pilgrim's path through this world from the cross to the glory" (Heb. 10:38).

Football Without Ball

The only place in the world where football is played seriously without a ball is the Caroline group of the South Pacific islands. There are 11 men on a side, and they assume the orthodox positions. As there is no ball, the players merely hop on one leg until they come up against their opposite numbers. Then each player places the sole of his free foot against the sole of an opponent's foot, and pushes. The man who falls is out of the game.

Though one would imagine that such matches would be over in a few minutes, they last for hours, for the players are remarkably skillful in keeping their balance. When all the players of one side have been eliminated, the other is recognized as the winning one.

There are no drawn games and no referee, but large crowds turn out to watch.

Tinley Park Community NEWS

The First Grade room mothers are having a cup cake sale today. The proceeds are to be put into a fund which totals $18 to date, for a Primer typewriter. To aid this cause plan on having a home-made cup-cake for your dessert.

This week the eighth grade began work on the play they will present at the graduation.

Several eighth grade boys and girls of the Tinley Park school visited the Blue Island High School Wednesday at the invitation of Superintendent Richards of the High School. The high school's curriculum was explained to them and lunch was served gratis in the cafeteria.

A meeting of high school teachers and principals of contributing elementary schools was held at the Blue Island High School Wednesday evening. The purpose of the meeting was to formulate a plan for curriculum reorganization and closer cooperation between elementary and high schools. Dr. Hood of the University of Illinois, spoke at this meeting.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Norman W. Keuch, our dear son and brother who passed away five years ago May 6.

God loaned him for a little while To grace the place where he was sent.

He had a kind word and a smile, For all he met, wherever he went.

And when he saw the better way That humans may pursue in life,

God ended then his mortal stay Within this world of toil and strife.

LOVINGLY FATHER, MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

OBSERVE 40th ANNIVERSARY
Mr. and Mrs. George Schultz residing northeast of Tinley Park were very pleasantly reminded of the fact that they were married forty years Monday night. Some relatives had called for them in the evening asking them to go their home for a little visit, but after they got on the road they continued on to Tinley Park and wound up at the Saenger Hall where about 250 relatives and friends had gathered to surprise them. And it was a surprise. The evening was spent in dancing and other diversions. Delicious eats and drinks were served and the honored couple also received many useful gifts. All made merry until a late hour.

One of the big surprises was the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Breitbarth of Truman, Minn., relatives of the honored couple who did not know they had come until they met them in the hall.

FOR CHOOSING A FORD!

A few minutes in this year's Ford will open your eyes to a lot of good things! To roominess and a big-car ride that's a real discovery in low-priced money's worth. To economy that's really amazing. To hydraulic brakes that are the biggest ever used on a low-price car. To easy finger-tip gear shifting of the sort the fine cars use. To roadability and handling ease that make driving lots of fun.

But you'll find the mightiest arguments of all in the 8 fine cylinders under the hood. As 6 million Ford V-8 owners now know, only a Ford adds V-8 performance to low cost and thrift.

Drive a Ford V-8. Before you pick out your new car, let the world's most famous "8" tell you its own matchless story... on the road!

Your Ford Dealer wants your deal... See him today!

BEST GAS MILEAGE, TOO!

The 85 h.p. Ford V-8 gave most miles per gallon of all standard-equipped cars in its price class in the 1940 running of the famous official and impartial Gilmore-Yosemite Economy Run! Also... Ford owners are reporting that the efficient, precision-built Ford engine requires no oil added between regular changes!

Will Your Home Be Modern Tomorrow, Too?

Make Sure...

for tomorrow beckons
with new and improved electric home conveniences

Proper wiring is one of the most important features of a modern home, and yet it is often easily overlooked when plans for building, remodeling, or modernizing are discussed. With wiring for the most part out of sight behind walls and under floors, by far the greater percentage of homes of today have wiring facilities that are totally inadequate to meet the ever-increasing uses of electricity.

Each passing year sees an ever wider acceptance of such well-known electric aids as air-conditioning, modern lighting, refrigeration, and numerous small electric home appliances. If you are building, remodeling, or modernizing your home, make your plans include adequate wiring for both present and for future needs. Perhaps your present budget may not permit the inclusion of all the electric aids you hope to have some day, but by allowing in advance for such future contributions to better living, you can make substantial savings later. And you'll also find proper wiring saves from day to day by delivering all the electric power you pay for...wasting none. Look ahead...Plan ahead...Live ahead! Get in touch with your neighborhood Electric Wiring Contractor and let him show you how easy and economical it is to install adequate wiring in your home. Ask him for full particulars!

VFW Buddy Poppy Sale Sat., May 25

Saturday May 25th, the members of the Ladies Auxiliary to Wm. Martin Post No. 725 VFW., will conduct their annual sale of Buddy Poppies which gives the general public an opportunity to support a veteran welfare program inspired by a desire "to honor the dead by helping the living."

Proceeds of the annual Buddy Poppy sale are kept apart from all other funds and are used exclusively for relief work, local, state and national.

The little red blossoms, emblematic of those that bloom in Flanders' Fields, are assembled by disabled veterans in government hospitals, for several months previous to Memorial Day.

The task of making these poppies is a congenial one. It offers the soldier handicapped by illness or wounds an opportunity to earn during his convalescence. In addition, hospital authorities testify, to the therapeutic value of this work in keeping the minds of the patients busily occupied, thus bringing relief to nerves drawn taut by shell shock and wounds that refuse to heal.

The poppy relief fund, realized thru the sale of these flowers, gives the local post money with which to carry on its welfare work among comrades and their dependents in distress. It permits a system of Veterans' Administration liaison service on behalf of the veteran seeking hospitalization or compensation.

One cent from each poppy sold goes to the VFW National Home at Eaton Rapids, Mich., a refuge created for the orphans of deceased veterans. This home is giving these youngsters a roof they can call their own, clothes, school facilities, and the comforts that would have been theirs had their heroic fathers survived the sufferings of war.

Wear a Buddy Poppy Memorial Day!

Dividend Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. Let us prove it to you.

Racing Blacksmith Set to Hammer Out Victory on Speedway 'Anvil'

Russell Snowberger, Detroit's "racing blacksmith," shown while tuning up for the big race at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The smith, a mighty driver is he—

Yessiree! Russell Snowberger, the racing blacksmith, is one of the best in the business of forging winning links in auto racing.

Five times in the money at Indianapolis, Snowberger came back to the famous Hoosier speedway with the honor of having the winning car in the Pike's Peak hill climb in 1939.

He's a veteran, but don't call him old if you value your health. "Snowy" first drove into the money at Indianapolis in 1930, and ten years later he's one of the reliable when it comes to picking a challenger to displace Wilbur Shaw as champion.

He grew strong swinging a hammer on an anvil and he got tough tooling racing cars at high speed around every track in the country.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Fred Whitlark entertained in her home on Sunday afternoon May 5, the occasion being the seventh birthday of her daughter Marianne. There were eight girls present. Games were enjoyed and she received many pretty gifts. The table decorations were in pink and white, the centerpiece being a lamb cake, baked by Marianne's grandmother Mrs. Louis Krusemark. Mrs. Krusemark, has become very famous for her lamb cakes and the guests enjoyed this one very much. Everyone had a joyous time.

LITTLE MISS
PURITANBy ALICE P. SHARPLESS
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

HELEN TRENT drained her coffee cup and pushed her dinner away untouched. Her light hair lay in moist ringlets on her temples and her soft, dark eyes were shadowed by circles.

"It was an awful day, Alma. Even Dr. Pollack was cross."

"No saint can be perfect all the time," said her sister.

Ignoring the sarcasm, Helen went on.

"He scolded and fumed—and then blamed it on me. He said I was touchy—and old maidish."

"What do you care?"

"Alma! You know I care a lot what he thinks. I've worked for him since I was eighteen and he's always been wonderful—not like most bosses."

"Nor you like most secretaries. I think you've always been half in love with him."

Helen's delicate face flushed.

"Don't joke about that. You know he's married."

"Not so happily."

"He never said so. It's only things I've pieced together."

"No. Ever since I've been there she has been in California nursing an invalid mother. He says her mother is dying."

"She's been a long time at it. Maybe they're getting a divorce?"

"No. He's crazy about her, so his patients say."

"Well, don't worry over his troubles."

"I don't. Only it makes me unhappy when he's like he was today."

"Then why don't you marry Bob?"

"You sound like Dr. Pollack. He said I needed a man."

"Helen! Was he making love to you?"

"No—no. It was nothing, only—" she trailed off into an uncomfortable silence.

"Darling," her sister gently squeezed her arm. "Do take Bob. He loves you. Don't waste your time over a married man—and one who cares nothing about you, at that."

Angrily Helen jerked away and started toward her own room. At the door she called back.

"He does care for me, as a friend."

"As an efficient machine!—about how much work he can get out of you!"

"That's not true!—And I tell you, I am thinking seriously of getting married. Don't tell Bob."

Her sister laughed skeptically.

"I've heard that before, too."

Helen slammed her door. Then she began to dress for her date with Bob, taking almost as much care as she always used when she dressed for the office.

The next morning, after Dr. Pollack had returned from the hospital, Helen knocked at his door.

"May I speak to you a minute, Doctor?"

"Of course." He smiled down at her. "What's the matter, Helen?"

Tired? You've lost your nice color."

She shook her head, impatient with the interruption.

"I am going to be married in three weeks."

"Married! Helen, you can't."

Then after a second, "Who is it?"

"No one you know. Bob Wetherall."

"How long have you known him? About a week?"

"Since I was fourteen."

"You don't love that fellow. I've never heard you even speak of him."

"Do you tell me all your private affairs?"

"So that's it! I'm only fit to be spoken to on business." He dropped in his chair and leaned towards her, pleadingly. "Helen, I thought we'd been friends. Haven't we?"

"I've always felt friendly toward you, Doctor." Even to herself she sounded stiff and cold.

He drew back and shrugged helplessly.

"That's that. Well, get married then."

"Only yesterday, you, yourself, said it was what I needed."

For a second he stared at her curiously. Then he laughed but there was no amusement in his voice.

"I did say something—but hardly in this connection. Never mind. I want you to be happy. That's all that counts in this world, just happiness."

Uneasily she changed the subject. "I'll break in another girl before I leave."

"You can't leave. I couldn't get along without you."

She shook her head, thinking bitterly. "Alma is right, all he cares about is my efficiency."

"He can let me have you from nine till five."

"No! No!" she cried passionately. Then, taking a deep breath, she went on primly. "Bob wouldn't like it."

"I understand." His voice was dull. "Day after tomorrow I'm starting on a month's trip. Break in a girl while I'm gone. That will be all this morning."

"Doctor!" She could not bear that they should part like this.

"Yes? Oh, the wedding present. Could you pick it out?"

Tears welled up in Helen's dark eyes.

"No!" she cried and fled abruptly. When Dr. Pollack returned to his office a month later he found everything, even the girl bent over the typewriter, looking familiar.

"Good-morning," he said gruffly. The girl turned and he cried sharply. "Helen! What are you doing here?"

A flush overspread her face and she stammered a bit.

"Why, you wanted me to stay—so—here I am."

For a minute he stood, jingling the keys in his pocket and staring past her through the open window.

"I'm sorry. I've been thinking and you're right. A married woman's place is in her home."

"You mean you don't want me here?"

"Not that. I can't have you here since you're married."

The girl walked to the window. She stood there twisting the shade cord and examining it carefully as she spoke.

"I was going to tell you later—I'm not married!"

"What?" He strode to her side and whirled her around.

Once again the painful flush stole over her face and neck. But she answered quietly, though bitterly.

"Your diagnosis was quite right. I am a perfect old maid. When it came to choose between my job and a husband, I took my job."

"Helen! Why? Did I—?"

She managed a smile and shrugged. He shook her shoulder impatiently.

"Don't fool with me now. Did—?" Their eyes met. His arms closed around her.

"Darling! If you knew the hell I've been through!"

After a second she gently freed herself.

"What's the matter? Don't you love me after all?"

"Yes, I love you entirely. But I haven't forgotten your wife."

"My wife?" he echoed stupidly.

"Yes," she was angry now, "the woman whose picture I've dusted every morning, the woman you married years ago and who once must have meant everything to you, to judge from your own words."

For a second longer he looked at her in the same stupid astonishment. Then he began to laugh. Still laughing he caught her once more in his arms.

"You little idiot! I thought you had tumbled to the gag ages ago. I haven't any wife, nor ever did have. I bought the pictures, and invented the lady. It was swell protection against the man-hunting mammals of this town. Is it all right now, little Miss Puritan?"

FOR A SHOWER PARTY FOR SPRING BRIDE
(See Recipes Below)

Here Comes the Bride!

And so they are married—and after the ceremony there is to be a wedding reception at the home of the bride's mother.

It takes a bit of planning to carry through a lovely wedding so that every detail is correct. And the reception which follows must be as nearly perfect as it is possible to make it. Plan a menu that's simple and easy to serve, yet appetizing and delicious to eat. Set the table for buffet service—using your loveliest linen, silver and china. Since the proverbial color scheme for the bride's table is green and white, plan to use white flowers for the centerpiece; if candles are used, they may be white or green.

A party for the bride calls for something very special in the way of food. Here's a menu for a wedding reception, with tested recipes to enable you to use it as it is given.

Assorted Hors d'Oeuvres

Grapefruit-Lobster or Crabmeat Salad

Buttermilk Rolls Butter

Celery Olives Radishes

Pistachio Ice Cream

Bride's Cake Groom's Cake

Punch Coffee

For a shower party for a spring bride, serve simple—but very good—refreshments like this:

Bride's Pie

Coffee Assorted Salted Nuts

You'll find other recipes for special party cakes and desserts in my cook book "Better Baking." There's a recipe for wedding cakes, as well.

Bride's Pie.

(Serves 10 to 12)

6 egg whites

¼ teaspoon salt

1 cup sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla

1½ quarts strawberry ice cream

2 baked pie shells

Beat egg whites until foamy, add salt and continue beating until the egg whites are stiff. Gradually beat in the sugar and continue beating until the egg whites are stiff and glossy.

Add vanilla. Pack ¾ quart of ice cream into each pie shell. Cover with meringue and bake in a very hot oven (550 degrees) until meringue is lightly browned. Serve immediately.

Assorted Canapes.

Place chilled shrimp on a bed of shaved ice; serve cocktail sauce with it as an accompaniment. Stuff celery stalks with cream cheese which has been mixed with chopped stuffed olives. Cut crusts from slices of very fresh bread and cut loaf in long lengthwise slices. Spread with cream cheese. Roll as for jelly roll and slice in very thin slices. Brush with melted butter, place on broiler and toast lightly. Serve hot.

Grapefruit Lobster or Crabmeat Salad.

Cut grapefruit in half, remove center with grapefruit corer. With grapefruit knife cut around each section and remove membrane. Cover edges of grapefruit with finely chopped parsley. Fill chilled center of grapefruit with lobster or crabmeat. Top with mayonnaise and serve.

Buttermilk Rolls.

(Makes 2½ dozen)

1 cake yeast

2 tablespoons lukewarm water

2 cups buttermilk (at room temperature)

6½ cups of flour (approximately)

¾ cup shortening

¾ cup sugar

1½ teaspoons salt

½ teaspoon soda

1 teaspoon baking powder

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Combine with buttermilk and mix well. Add about 2 cups of flour and beat until smooth. Cover and let rise in a warm place until the batter is light and bubbly. Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly.

PATTERN SEWING CIRCLE

little-girl fashions you ever discovered, and the source of many different daytime outfits for your small daughter.

A linen or gingham pinafore, with mull or dimity blouse, will be pretty for general wear. Plaid or striped seersucker will be practical for the pinafore when she wears it as a sunback frock—can be tubbed so easily, and needn't be ironed. The step-by-step sew chart gives complete, detailed directions.

Pattern No. 8674 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2½ yards of 35-inch material for pinafore and panties; ¾ yard for blouse, 2½ yards ribbon. Send order to:

Speed housecleaning!
Save hours of time. Polish as you clean!

Lady, you needn't tire yourself, waste hours of time: cleaning and then polishing woodwork, furniture and floors. Instead, O-Cedar them; polish as you clean; do both at once so easily... for O-Cedar cleans the ugly dirty film of dirt and leaves instead a lovely glow, a soft and silken luster. Ask for genuine:

Care, and not fine stables, makes the good horse.

BUSY mothers with lively little girls in the 2-to-3 size range can solve several important problems with this one clever, very complete pattern (8674). It includes a puff-sleeved blouse with drawstrings, panties, and a pinafore frock that can be used, without the blouse, as a sunback outdoor fashion for summer play, too. The whole ensemble is adorable, with a touch of quaintness that adds much charm to its simplicity. You'll find it one of the best

AROUND THE HOUSE

If you like scented linens and use scented soaps store the soap, unwrapped, in the linen drawers or closet. Sachets, too, lend pleasing odors.

A few cloves added to vegetable soup will give it a delicious flavor.

When you boil potatoes and want them to be floury, put a heaped teaspoonful of sugar in the boiling water. They will taste delicious.

A teaspoon of vinegar beaten into boiled frosting when flavoring is added will keep it from being brittle or breaking when cut.

Mildew can be avoided if damp articles are never placed in clothes hampers. Dry all clothing and household linen thoroughly. Don't let it collect in damp basements, dark closets or other spots that are likely to be damp.

To clean bed springs use a long-handled, moderate-sized bottle brush. Dip the brush in hot water quite often. Such a brush gets into corners much more easily than the dish mop which ordinarily is used for this purpose.

Venetian Blinds to Simulate Windows

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HAVE you ever tried placing your davenport on the side of the room where there was a single window? You probably found that it did not look well, because the back was just high enough to give the draperies an awkward cut-off appearance, as shown in the upper sketch. The lower sketch shows how a friend of mine solved this problem, and changed her living room that had seemed hopeless, into an attractive, cheerful place. There are no windows under those lowered blinds. A painted box-like cornice board was made about 2 feet longer than the davenport and was fastened to the top of the frame of the one window. The venetian blinds and the rods for the draperies were fastened inside this. A narrow shelf for plants just the length of the davenport back was fastened securely to the window sill. The flowers increase the illusion that there are three windows and add a cheerful note of color.

NOTE: Sewing Book No. 1 tells how to make this cornice board. Also how to make curtains and draperies for every room in the house from child's room to kitchen. All about slip covers. Dressing tables from boxes, tables and old mirrors. You will be delighted with it. Send order to:

Tinley Legion Post To Present Play

uates from the "Big House" in Joliet (taking a post graduate course) air their troubles in a humorous way.

"Willie, the Tramp and Co." presents a lively skit with plenty of excitement as a climax. And don't forget "Rubin Rubino" and his trained animals. They are very versatile and will give an excellent performance.

These comedy acts are balanced by five professional acts. These acts can in no way be classed as amateurs trying to make the "big time". They "Have Arrived" and will present their acts here exactly the same as they would in any of the legitimate theatres. On Friday night Martin Barnett, the magician, will convince you that the hand is quicker than the eye in a clever act that will amaze you, I am sure.

Due to previous bookings, on Saturday night he will be replaced by Bill Talent, comedy juggler, who is just as clever an artist in his line as Martin Barnett.

As a finale to the show we will have "Lest We Forget", a touching scene taken from real life during the world war and is probably being enacted in many hospitals in Europe at the present time. Then down with the curtain and the end of an enjoyable evening.

Now I have tried to give you a brief glimpse of the show and I am sure you will want to see for yourself just what the American Legion can do to give you entertainment that has variety, fun, surprises and excitement.

As you know the proceeds are to be used for the American Legion Memorial and tickets are on sale at Cavett's drug store. At the request of many people we have put in a section of reserved seats each night for those who want to be sure of a good seat even tho they arrive late. —Harry Trevarthorn, Publicity chair.

To Present Play

A three-act comedy play "Yours Truly Willie" under the direction of Miss Pfeil will be given by the high school tonight. There will be music between acts. If you want to see how a young boy takes the great problems of life, come to the Mokena school auditorium tonight at 8 p. m., daylight saving time. If you haven't bought your tickets yet you may buy them at the door.
